

THE HISTORY OF THE EUROPEAN ATHLETICS CALENDAR CONFERENCE

The foundation of the International Amateur Athletic Federation (IAAF) occurred in 1912 but it was not until 1932 that a European Committee was created by the sport's global governing body, whose remit was initially limited to organising the European Athletics Championships, the first of which were held in 1934.

After World War II, it became a necessity to hold annual meetings at which the leaders of the national federations in Europe could co-ordinate their calendars for the following year, which would then be published in a booklet with all the other major IAAF and European competitions.

For many years. The Calendar Conference would be held in conjunctions with meetings of the European Committee of the IAAF.

At the IAAF Budapest Congress in 1966, it was decided that subsequently the European Committee of the IAAF would be elected by the European Federations alone and so began the process towards the formation of the European Athletic Association in 1969 and the recognition at the 1970 IAAF Congress in Stockholm of an independent European organisation.

From 1969 until 2001, the Calendar Conference was incorporated into the Congresses of the European Athletic Association or were held as separate events in those years where no Congress was held. In conjunction with the Calendar Conferences, there were always also meetings of the European Athletics Council and other bodies.

The traditional date of the conference has generally been in October or November, after the summer competition season has ended. In 2003, the Congress and the Calendar Conference were held separately for the first time, the latter in conjunction with a workshop of Member Federation representatives and meetings of other organisations.

Compared to 1969, when only about 100 delegates representing mainly national federations attended the Calendar Conference, nowadays it is usual see more than 400 participants.

In addition to members of the European Athletics Council, representatives of the Member Federations and other members of the European Athletics and IAAF families, taking part in the Calendar Conferences are IAAF and European Athletics competition organisers, national meeting organisers, athlete representatives, commercial representatives and stakeholders, the media and representatives of other international athletics organisations.

In 2008, European Athletics took the decision to reshape the Calendar Conferences into a more coherent format and so the European Athletics Convention was created with the aim of providing more credibility and added values for all stakeholders.

The Convention now provides more content and more substance for the European Athletics Member Federations and offers additional opportunities for workshops, education, networking and socialising apart of the usual calendar-related activities.

The Convention now offers a better platform for the media and sponsors, especially as it is now held in conjunction with the Golden Tracks Awards, which honour the male and female European Athlete of the Year and which were introduced in 2014.
